Ambassadors for the King in Turkey: A Practical Guide for Taking the Gospel of Jesus to the Nation of Turkey Yakup Korkmaz

Yakup, a veteran missionary to Turkey, shares years of his own experience of ministry throughout Turkey and the Middle East. The content of the book also echoes the concerns of many Kurdish, Turkish, Zaza, Armenian and Syriac background Christians, who have witnessed damaging cultural mistakes made by missionaries in the region. Other material that is found in this book is a result of interactions with Muslims on a daily basis, ethnographic studies done by Yakup, and scholarly research. Yakup is an ordained minister and author of books in Turkish and English. He holds a degree in Pastoral Studies and a Master's degree in Muslim Studies and is currently finishing a M.A. degree in Religion. This is an invaluable resource for the missionary to Turkey. It is the first book of its kind, which navigates through Turkish and Kurdish culture along with giving practical advice on how to effectively evangelize in Turkey. It helps the Ambassador of Jesus with the dos and don'ts to avoid making common cultural mistakes. Along with presenting highly effective apologetic arguments, Yakup explains how any long or short-term missionary can openly and easily share their faith through a method he calls "Research Evangelism". This book is used by multiple missions organizations which work within Turkey and it is recommended reading before coming to Turkey.
